Regulatory Update

April 2013

Bolivia:

In October of 2012, the Bolivian “Ley 164” was Approved whereby it was denoted that all products must be Approved before entering the country.

Bolivia Telecommunications Authority, the ATT (Autoridad de Regulación y Fiscalización de Telecomunicaciones y Transportes), was granted a period of 6 months to establish Type Approval regulations and procedures. Until this point, Type Approval has remained voluntary only.

The ATT now advise that their Type Approval regulations and procedures are not yet in place, and final drafts are expected to be reviewed for official Approval and sign off at the end of May.

During this transition period, the ATT are offering manufacturers the option to obtain a Temporary Approval. The ATT advise that this process is voluntary only, and does not negate from the need to reapply for Type Approval once the official regulations and procedures are in place.

Full requirements for mandatory Approval will be confirmed once the Type Approval procedure is in place and an additional update will be provided accordingly.
